

Wanted: Associate Course Directors Have you got what it takes?

Owing to the rapid growth of our training, consultancy and international business we wish to expand our group of associate course directors. Our associates are self-employed experts who work alongside the in-house team of CDs to deliver our core programme at Easingwold and bespoke training to customers throughout the UK and beyond.

We are looking for people who have:

- The talent and drive to match EPC's training standards
- The self-confidence and ambition to exploit the opportunities offered by flexible working arrangements
- Proven ability in training delivery to small and large groups using interactive and participative techniques
- Subject matter expertise in any of the following areas of Civil Protection:

Risk Management
Care of People
CBRN
Crowd Safety
Business Continuity

Emergency Planning
Emergency Management
Communications & Media
Health Service Management
Legal Aspects of Civil Protection
Central/Regional & Local Govt

- The ability to work closely with other EPC Associates and Course Directors throughout the UK and internationally
- The capacity and experience to conduct training needs analyses from first principles, undertake training solution design and build bespoke programmes
- Education to degree level or equivalent to underpin the ability to deliver training across the spectrum from vocational to Master's degree level. EPC associates may have the opportunity to become associates of Leeds University Business School.

If you find this prospect interesting and stimulating then please contact:

Ken Lawson at the Emergency Planning College.
Email: ken.lawson@cabinet-office.x.gsi.gov.uk or
Phone: (01347) 825005 for further details.

The Emergency Planning College - Home to the UK's leading experts in emergency planning and crisis management training.