BCI Corporate Membership

Why become a BCI Corporate Member?

BCI Corporate Membership will help you embed business continuity and become more resilient by giving staff access to the right tools and resources:

- Good Practice Guidelines
- Thought Leadership & Research
- Networking
- Events
- Education & Training

BCI Corporate Membership is not only designed for those who carry out BC responsibilities daily, but also for those 'BC Champions & Coordinators' in all departments, and all staff throughout the business – top to bottom - to get a basic understanding of the principles of business continuity.

By becoming a BCI Corporate Member also demonstrates to your customers, partners, suppliers, and insurers your commitment to being a resilient organization.

Who is BCI Corporate Membership for?

Every organization - no matter size, location, industry, or sector.

There are various levels depending on the size of your organization.

Our current Corporate Members include:

- Finance (Abu Dhabi Islamic Bank, ABN Amro & EcoBank)
- Retail (Ahold Delhaiz & Marks & Spencer)
- Energy (National Grid, Emirates Nuclear Energy Company & BP International)
- Public Sector (National Archives (Abu Dhabi), Brisbane City Council, & Greater Manchester Fire & Rescue)
- Supply Chain (DHL & Mediterranean Shipping Co)
- Consultants (Deloitte, KPMG & PwC)

Speak to The BCI team and they will be able to help you with a tailored package to suit your company needs.

Royal Mail

How do you demonstrate to your key customers that you have robust contingency plans and a mature approach to business continuity – when you cannot share the details of your plans and you cannot afford formal compliance to ISO22301? Royal Mail has found a cost-effective solution through our long-term Premium membership with the BCI. Firstly, the BCI Good Practice Guidelines provides the framework to base our own Business Continuity Management (BCM) programme, hence ensuring our approach meets external best practice and is robust.

Our involvement with the BCI keeps us abreast of latest issues, business continuity threats and industry thinking. This provides the level of comfort and assurance our customers are seeking as part of their supply chain governance process.

Jeff Lewis, Head of Business Protection, Royal Mail

Fusion Risk Management

It offers our employees access to best practices, chances for personal and career development, and unrivalled networking opportunities virtually and globally. BCI's dedication to educating business continuity professionals is why Fusion is proud to be a corporate member!

BCI's commitment to supporting and nurturing practitioners is moving the industry forward. Through it, we are not only able to better our company and our employees, but also use the knowledge and expertise to help our clients. At Fusion, we are committed to customer success, which is why continuing to partner with BCI is so important.

Tracey Forbes- Rice, Vice President of Customer Engagement, Fusion Risk Management
